AFTERCARE

- Following your procedure, expect your color to be sharper, darker, and bolder than the final result. Once you have healed fully, the pigment they will look softer and about 20-30% lighter. The darkest days are typically 2-4.
- Expect to see redness and slight swelling both in and around the brow area. Pigment (color) itself may appear warmer than expected due to red, irritated skin.

DAY 1-10

- A permanent makeup procedure is the equivalent of a skin-deep wound - like a scratch you might get around the house. The day of your procedure, expect a small amount of fluid, weeping or blood. Firmly blot brows with a clean gauze or slightly damp paper towel to remove lymph. Excess lymph may dry and forms scabs too early. Blotting typically only needs to be done the day of your visit.
- Cleanse brows morning and night with mild, gentle cleanser and pat dry or allow to air dry.
- Apply After Inked supplied with clean q-tip or clean finger on dry skin only. After Inked may be applied several times during the day, however only a THIN layer should be used at any time. You may need to apply once a day, and you many need to apply 3-4 times a day... This is dependent on your skin. A good rule of thumb is apply whenever your skin looks or feels tight and dry. (For reference of how much cream you should be using - think grain of rice.)
- Brow area may begin to itch and appear slightly thicker in texture before taking on a flaky, dry, narrow appearance. Do not pick any of flakes, allow to fall off completely on their own.
- After all peeling/flaking is done, color may take on a hazy, too-dull, too-light, muted appearance. We call this the "Foggy Phase". The color will return {bloom} after healing is fully complete, typically between the 3rd and 4th week.

Keep in mind, when healing is complete, it is normal to have lighter/less saturated areas. You may lighten up to 30% the first time through.

SERVICES AND MAINTENANCE RATES - BROWS

Microblading vs. Powder Brows: Which One is for me?

With the sudden popularity and media attention to the term microblading, many are led to believe microblading is not a tattoo process or is not permanent makeup. Permanent cosmetics, micropigmentation, dermal implantation, microblading/micro stroking, eyebrow embroidery, hair stroke brows, powder brows, digital brows, etc. are all different names for the same procedure – cosmetic tattooing. However, within the realm of Permanent Makeup, there are different methods of application:

HAIR STROKE BROWS:

The look of "hair"... Typically gives the most realistic results. ALL skin types will heal hair strokes differently, some will maintain very crisp strokes, and others will look slightly more "blended" - this is unpredictable.

With a manual hand tool (microblade) or with a machine, strokes are gently implanted into the skin in the very uppermost layers of the skin, creating a crisp, clean, hair-like effect. Because there is not as much color implanted and because the hair strokes are typically is so fine, this method by itself requires more frequent touch-ups to maintain the new color.

* Two, and sometimes three, visits are necessary to create final result.

Touchup rate is typically more often than other techniques, lasting the average person 10-18 months. Of course, individual results will vary.

POWDER / SHADED BROWS:

Very much able to achieve a soft, natural look, this is a more "filled in" look. Pigment is implanted to resemble the powdery or shaded look of makeup. While typically not solid or harsh-looking, this option is a more filled-in look than that of hair strokes.

While a second visit is included, it is not always necessary for final result.

*Touchup rate typically less frequent, lasting the average person 1 to 4 years. Of course, individual results will vary.

COMBINATION HAIR STROKE AND POWDER BROWS:

Bringing the above two application techniques together.

A combination of hair strokes and soft shading to create a polished, full brow, maintaining the softness of crisp hair strokes through the defining areas of the brow. While hair strokes will tend to fade, this style of brow will hold its pigment and shape for a longer duration, that closer to the expected longevity of a powder brow. The majority of the brow is typically done in the powder style. Individual results will vary.
